Art Unit: 1771

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Oathout, U.S. Patent No. 5,459,912 in view of Meitner et al, U.S. Patent No. 4,328,279 and Wallis et al, U.S. Patent No. 6,645,930. Oathout discloses a clean room wipe made by a process of providing a first layer of polymeric staple fibers, a second layer of natural fibers and hydroentangling to form a composite fabric. The polymeric fibers can be thermoplastic fibers such as polyester, polypropylene or polyamide. See abstract and col. 2, line 50- col. 3, line 29. Oathout differs from the claimed invention because Oathout does not disclose that the wipe should have a sodium ion content of less than 45 ppm and that it should be rinsed with an acetic acid/water solution. Meitner et al teaches applying a treatment to clean room wipes in order to reduce the sodium ion content of the nonwoven wipe. See col. 2, lines 44-54. The sodium ion content can be 40 ppm, see Table II, cold water embodiment. Therefore, it would have been obvious to have applied the treatment of Meitner et al to the fabric of Oathout, motivated by the expectation that this would result in a wipe having a greatly reduced amount of sodium ions while still maintaining good wiping characteristics. Oathout differs from the claimed invention because it does disclose rinsing the fabric with acetic acid and water. Wallis et al teaches that clean room wipes can be rendered less flammable by rinsing the wipe with a solution of acetic acid and water. See abstract as well as col. 3, lines 43-50; col.

Art Unit: 1771

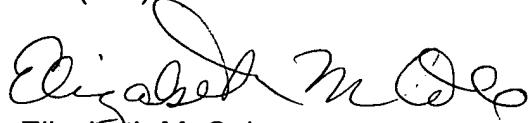

7, lines 15-36. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to have rinsed the fabric of Oathout with the acetic acid/water solution of Wallis, motivated by the expectation that this would provide the wipe with protection against spontaneous combustion when the wipe was used to contain spills of alkaline products. See abstract.
